BREAKS RECORD TO REACH DYING SON.

S. A. Kendall in Dizzy Flight Up Mountains on Special Train.

Baltimore & Ohio Bonds Special 112 Miles in 151 Minutes, Including Three Minute Stop Here—Fastest Time Ever Made.

Rushing onward through the night in a special train, the two cars hurtling and swaying around dangerous curves as the engine ahead took them without slackening speed, Hon. Samuel A. Kendall early this morning reached his home in Meyersdale after a flying trip across the continent to reach the bedside of his dying son. The race with death was won. Today the lad is still alive, displaying remarkable strength and fortitude, but the end is near.

Despite his tender years it was evident that little Van Nest Kendall realized the strenuous efforts of his frantic father was making to reach him. Although the attending physicians had abandoned all hopes of his recovery and help forth no encouragement that the lad would survive until his father could arrive from distant Oregon, the boy clung tenaciously to life and despite his grief it was with a sigh of relief that Mr. Kendall learned this morning that the boy was still alive.

The run made by the second section of No. 10 last night will long be remembered by the railroad men of Connellsville and Pittsburgh divisions. Especially will the Connellsville division officials recall it with pride, for despite the steep grades east of here the special was enabled to make faster running time on that section than over the better grade of the west end.

Mr. Kendall came from Chicago last evening on the Manhattan Special of the Pennsylvania railroad. Telegrams kept the wires hot as the Pennsylvania flyer sped eastward and a special was arranged for. Arriving in Pittsburgh Mr. Kendall flung himself into a taxicab at the Union Station and all speed ordinances were forgotten in the ride to the Baltimore & Ohio depot. There the special train awaited. Engine No. 1353 had steam up and the air pumps were panting impatiently as Engineer Charles Beltz gave the iron steed its final inspection and mounted his seat in the cab. At the rear of the train paced Conductor Bert Christner, eagerly watching the gate. There was a chug chug of the taxicab as it drew up to the station. Mr. Kendall dashed through the gates and even before he reached the four coach Engineer Beltz had received his signal and the train drew out of the station. Dispatchers and operators in the yards had received their orders, the track was clear and soon the train was gathering speed, picking its way through the many switches and finally spurring along the main line. The start was made at 11:03. Through the string of towns between Pittsburgh and McKeesport the special dashed bell clanging and whistle screeching a warning. Beyond McKeesport the running was better.

In Connellsville there was an air of tense suspense about the dispatcher's office. Night Chief Dispatcher W. W. Haines, long before the special arrived, had mapped out his plan of action and Dispatcher Thomas A. Adams got his trains in shape that there might be no delay. Orders were flashed for eastbound freight to take sidings in ample time to enable the special to make the best possible time.

At 12:30 the panting engine drew up to the station here. In a flash Engineer Beltz was on the ground, looking over the machinery and sprinkling a dash of oil here and there. His fireman assisted him. Conductor Christner hurried into the telegraph office and grasped the orders which awaited him there. Mr. Kendall alighted and paced nervously up and down the platform, watch in hand. The actual running time from Pittsburgh was an hour and 22 minutes for the 67 miles.

Christner handed Beltz his orders, both boarded the train and three minutes later the trip up the mountains was started. The special flashed past Greengarden Junction in a swirl of dust. The townsmen saw a flash past the window and then only the red markers could be seen until the train swung out of sight beyond the curves. It was the same story at every tower until the destination was reached; a swift whistle, glimmer as the train swept by and then naught but the three gleaming eyes of red until the train was out of sight.

The 55 miles to Meyersdale was made in one hour and six minutes. At 1:32 the train pulled into the depot here. Mr. Kendall alighted from the train, was reassured that his little lad was still alive, and then stepped into the waiting automobile. Chaufffour Car Scott whisked him to the Kendall home, where the family was gathered about the bedside of the dying boy.

Trailreaders say that the run of the special is the best that has ever been made on either division. The scheduled time of the Duquesne Limited between Connellsville and Meyersdale was 25 minutes, and the Duquesne is the speediest of the eastern trains.

Mr. Kendall left Roseburg, Ore., Monday night. His trip across the continent lasted a little more than four days. He traveled on regular trains, but was fortunate in making close connections at practically every point. Free use of the telegraph resulted in trains being held in order that there would be no time lost on this account.

William Wishart Suddenly Stricken

William Wishart, manager of the Union Supply Company's store at Trotter, was suddenly stricken with an attack of rheumatism of the heart Thursday night and for several hours was in a serious condition. Mr. Wishart resides at Trotter and returned to the store in the evening after the regular closing hour. He was on his way to the refrigerator when seized with the attack. A woman, who happened to be passing the store heard his moans. She at once gave the alarm and on entering the store Mr. Wishart was found lying on the floor in an unconscious condition. He was removed to his home and a physician was immediately summoned and remained with Mr. Wishart until he regained consciousness. This morning his condition was greatly improved.

Henry Goldsmith Suffers a Stroke

Henry Goldsmith, one of the oldest and most prominent residents of town, was stricken with a stroke of paralysis Thursday afternoon at his home on West Main street. Mr. Goldsmith contracted a severe cold over a week ago and since Wednesday had not been about much. The stroke came on him gradually. Last evening his condition became worse but this morning there was a slight change for the better. He is conscious but is unable to talk.

Since suffering the stroke his son, Dr. Milton Goldsmith of Pittsburgh, has been with him the greater part of the time.

Take Testimony in Damage Suit

Testimony was taken here yesterday in the office of Attorney H. George May in the damage suit of John Davis and wife against Dr. J. P. Kerr of Pittsburgh. Dr. Kerr is a member of the Pittsburgh Council.

The plaintiffs claim $30,000 as the result of an operation on Mrs. Davis. It is alleged that Dr. Kerr negligently left a bandage in an incision after sewing it up, following the operation. The bandage was removed during a subsequent operation at Morgantown. Attorneys Miner and Chalmers of Pittsburgh appeared for the parties in the suit.

Bert J. Thomas Disposes of Dwelling to Walter W. Haines.

Walter W. Haines today closed negotiations for the purchase of the residence of Bert J. Thomas at No. 109 East Cedar avenue. The consideration was $2,500.

The transfer of a lot in the East Park addition to Thomas figured in the transaction. Haines expects to occupy the residence in the near future.

Mrs. Emma Klirk Brookman left this morning for Copper Cove and Alsea, Texas, where she was called by the death of her uncle, Joseph W. Klirk. In his will Mr. Klirk left Mrs. Brookman $500 acres of valuable land and $4,000 in money.

More Troops to Quell Riots

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Aug. 12.—An additional battalion of the Yorkshire regiment was brought here during the night to assist the police and soldiers to suppress the rioting which continues unchecked.

The settlement of the strike, in London has not affected the strikers here, and the men are in a particularly ugly mood because of the ultimatum issued by the ship owners' federation that unless the men return to work on Monday, a complete lockout will be put into effect.

A mob of several thousand during the night wrecked 20 shops, which were looted of shoes and clothing. Large quantities of dressed provisions are spoiling in the ships. There is no coal in the docks for vessels desiring to clear.

Strikers Gain Most of Demands

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 12.—With thousands of workers returning to work today as a result of the settlement reached last night through the efforts of the Board of Trade, steps are being taken to relieve the distress which has become acute and the result of the tie-up of food supplies. The workers are jubilant over having gained a greater portion of their demands.

The teamsters of the Midland & Great Northern railroad struck today, claiming that their union is not affected by the wholesale settlement. The terms of the settlement increase the wages of the strikers approximately $3,000,000 per year.

Johnstown Man Takes Own Life

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 12.—S. E. Crossman, a leading druggist of Johnstown, committed suicide today by shooting himself at his home in this place.

He was about 55 years old and before coming to Johnstown had been a resident of Center county. He was active in politics, and had been taking a prominent part in the Republican primary now on in this county. No cause for the deed is known, except the fact that several prosecutions for illegal liquor selling had been started against him.

Cow Boy Band at Shady Grove

The famous Cow Boy Band will give two concerts at Shady Grove tomorrow afternoon and evening. Manager H. S. Coyle was fortunate in getting this noted band for a day at Shady Grove. The band has a week's engagement at Baltimore and are stopping off here tomorrow afternoon for two concerts in Fayette county.

They are coming through tomorrow afternoon from Cleveland arriving here at 3 o'clock. The band will go direct from here to the park. The concert will begin at 3:30 o'clock. The organization is one of the best park attractions traveling.

Sale of Coal for $380,000

Another big coal deal which will greatly benefit Fayette county was consummated by Holmes Davis, of Brownsville, when the W. H. Warner Coal Company of Cleveland, purchased 200 acres of coal on the Levi Stephens farm near Fayette City for $380,000. It is the intention of the officials of the purchasing company to erect at once a modern coal plant at a cost of $100,000. The coal has been under option for some time but the deal was closed yesterday by Mr. Davis, who is prominent in coal circles in that part of the county.

SUB-CONTRACTOR WANTS BILL PAID.

W. A. Overly Sues W. A. Hazlett After Committee Rejects Bill.

THE CLAIM IS FOR $1,278

Plaintiff Did Copper and Galvanized Iron Work on Trinity Church—Defense Is Made to Suit of D. J. Johnson on Big Claim.

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.

UNIONTOWN, Aug. 12.—Suit was entered today by W. A. Overly against Contractor W. A. Hazlett for $1,278 which is claimed due on the sub-contract for the copper and galvanized iron work on the new Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church in Connellsville. Overly states that his contract was for $1,700; that Hazlett paid him $500 and gave him an order on the building committee of the church for the balance, including $78 for additional work.

The building committee refused to pay the bill and Overly now seeks to recover the money from Hazlett. The church building is not yet completed.

G. C. Gans and Attorney L. Brownfield today entered an affidavit of defense to the suit of D. J. Johnson to recover $10,000 on a bond given to guarantee the transfer of 100 acres of West Virginia coal land by Gans to Johnson. Brownfield was the surety. The bond expired July 1.

The defendants allege that along with the bond was a verbal agreement that Johnson was to give 30 days' notice and a reasonable time, from 60 to 90 days, before the transfer was to have been made. It is claimed now that on July 10 and 14, after the bond had expired, the stock was ordered and twice refused. Damage to Gans is denied.

The Firemen End Convention

MONONGAHELA, Pa., Aug. 12.—The twelfth annual convention of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association closed here last evening after a day of tournaments. Officials of the organization are highly pleased over the convention and say it was one of the most successful in years, barring some unpleasant incidents.

John Stotwell, the Elma fireman who was run down last night by a horse wagon driven by J. H. Pollock of Monongahela, was seriously injured. Pollock, against whom a demonstration was made by 400 visiting firemen, was found not to have been responsible for the accident.

But recollection of the visiting firemen was not just light and a hundred or more decided to leave Monongahela on the last street car at 12:09 A. M. Others, however, did not approve of their leaving and fire was used to delay the street cars two hours. Just before the cars were due to leave for Pittsburgh, boards, boxes, shavings and refuse were piled on the tracks at Second street. In a few minutes flames were leaping as high as the house tops and nearby residents feared for their property. Firemen danced around in the glare whooping like Indians blocking the street cars.

As this fire burned another was started at Fourth street. This fire was near the residence of Dr. C. B. Wood. Fearing wind might fan the flames into his house Dr. Wood attempted to extinguish the flames with a hose, but firemen cut the hose. A last fire was started at Tenth street. When it had burned out the car started at 2 o'clock this morning.

The races yesterday were won as follows: Hand horse race, Turtle Creek, first prize, $50; Reliance, second prize, $25; hook and ladder race, Reliance, first prize, $35; Turtle Creek, second prize, $20; hub race, Turtle Creek, first prize, $55; Monessen, second prize, $20; service race, Reliance, first prize, $35; Whitaker, second, $20; horse race, Duquesne, only prize $35.

Nearly all the firemen returned home this evening.

What's Prejudice; President Taft!

BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 12.—"Are you prejudiced against the defendant?" asked Attorney Brunk of H. Jordan, a witness in a liquor selling case against Dan Duggan.

Jordan scratched his head.

"Do you know what prejudice means?"

"Oh, sure, Prejudice Taft, chief of the United States."

Jordan was excited.

Stanley Springs New Steel Pool

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The workings of the pool and the "gentlemen's agreements" that were prevalent in the steel trade up to 1909 were explained to the Stanley steel committee today by W. C. Temple of Pittsburgh, who was commissioner of the steel plate pool, the structural pool and the sheet shuffling pool. Temple was asked regarding the steel plate pool, the agreement in which has already been in evidence, and also in regards to a new compact for a pool among the structural steel manufacturers, springing from Chairman Stanley for the first time today.

It was entered into in 1907 when the production was apportioned among the members of the pool as follows: Carnegie Steel Company, 43% per cent; Jones & Laughlin 12% per cent; A. & P. Roberts Company, 11% per cent; Passaic Rolling Mill Company, 6 per cent; Phoenix Iron Company, 6 per cent; Cambria Iron Company, 5 per cent; Universal Construction Company, 4% per cent; Pittsville Iron Company, 3 per cent; Cleveland Rolling Mill Company, 3 per cent.

Fishing Poor Campers Report

M. J. Roland arrived last night from the West Side Outing camp at Guard, Md., and this morning Squire Harry Smurr, the genial clerk at the West Side Hotel, left to join the campers. He will remain until they break camp, which will probably be next Friday.

Mr. Roland reports a fine time and tells some great stories regarding their camp life. Fishing is not as good as the campers anticipated and so far the largest fish caught measured from 6 to 8 inches. Bert Chalfant and Roland seem to be the expert fishermen in the camp. Displayed in the West Side Hotel are pictures of the two fishermen and of the one lonely fish which they caught after fishing for several hours. Several of the campers are of the opinion that the fish Chalfant is credited with catching was caught by Captain A. W. Hart, who being too tired to carry it to camp, unhooked it from his line and hooked it to Chalfant's; at least that is the story told by some of the campers. There are nearly 17 camps in that section.

Thanksgiving Day on November 30

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—President Taft, it was learned yesterday, will designate Thursday, November 30, as Thanksgiving day this year. It always has been the custom to fix the last Thursday in the month. This year there had been some doubt because November happened to include five, instead of four Thursdays. The White House has been besieged by theatrical managers and those in charge of college football games to settle this doubt, so that definite arrangements could be made for the usual array of special performances and sports that mark the day.

Bankers throughout the country were said to be anxious that the President should designate November 23 as Thanksgiving day. They claimed that the making of November 30 a legal holiday would seriously interfere with their work, inasmuch as the law requires National banks to make their statements to the Treasury Department on the first day of each month and a holiday falling on the last day of the month would be most inconvenient.

Waldorf Astor Will Not Get Peerage

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 12.—(William) Waldorf Astor, multi-millionaire, American by birth, Briton by choice and descendant of the original John Jacob Astor, who laid the foundation of the Astor fortune by skinning skunks and other fur-bearing animals, has just completed the flight of his life for an English peerage. He lost.

The passage by the House of Lords of the veto bill ended Astor's dream. Astor purchased the Weekly Observer and the powerful appeals of its brilliant young Irish editor, J. J. Garvin, crystallized the opposition to Balfour and Lord Lansdowns whom he bitterly characterized as "traitors" and "hedgehogs."

Bridge Worker Killed.

Police Arrest Disorderlies

The lack of a comb with which to brush her raven locks resulted in considerable embarrassment and personal inconvenience for one Ella Burns, arrested last night on a charge of disorderly conduct. Because she could not comb her hair Ella declined to appear in person before Burgess J. L. Evans so a long distance sentence was imposed. It was $5 with the 72 hour alternative.

Officers McDonald and George Francis, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff M. Donnadio went to the Pinnacle about 10:20 last night and arrested Ella Burns, Andrew Burns and another man. The latter left a forfeit and was released without trial. The part was charged with being generally disorderly. Burns was given a 72 hour sentence, not having the $5.

James Miller was the other prisoner sentenced this morning. He paid $5 for the privilege of getting drunk last night.

Health Officer on Queen Street

Health Officer Allen Hyatt visited Queen street last evening, he told a reporter for The Courier today. Armed with his billiard cue, which he keeps as a menace towards evilly disposed canines, the Health Officer poked about the neighborhood.

Today he announced there must be a mistake about conditions there and became somewhat peevish when it was intimated that he has previously discounted complaints of citizens regarding existing conditions in their neighborhood. With the exception of a stable Hyatt gave Queen street a clean bill of health. The residents there do not agree with him.

A resident who watched Hyatt make his inspection, last night says the officer was not on Queen street, but inspected other streets instead.

Mercury Soared Again Yesterday

The temperature yesterday afternoon went way into the nineties. In fact, it got so far in that figure that by 5 o'clock it had dropped back only as far as 93, the highest mark the West Penn has recorded since the hot spell during July.

This morning the temperature was 71 degrees, materially less than the 81 mark of yesterday morning. Despite frequent promises of showers on the part of the weather forecaster, they have failed to materialize of late.

Taft is at Work on Veto Message

VERMILY, Mass., Aug. 12.—President Taft this afternoon got down to work on the preliminary construction of the veto messages on the Statehood and wool measures which he will probably present to Congress on Monday.

This morning the President played golf with Major Butt as his companion. Late this afternoon he plans to knock off work and take a motor trip along the shore.

Swing Girders Over Railroad

The McClintic-Marshall Company this morning began the heavy work on the steel trestle of the Western Maryland in the Hard bottom when the crews began swinging the heavy girders in place across the Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

The bridge has been completed up to the crossing over the Pennsylvania. Only a few spans remain to be placed.

FIREMEN SAVED A SCOTTTDALE HOTEL.

Splendid Work of Volunteer Department on Four Story Building

OF NEW SCOTTTDALE HOUSE

Surrounding Properties Were Threatened, But the Fire Was Kept Within Bounds—Origin of Blaze a Mystery—Big Crowd Was Out.

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.

SCOTTTDALE, Aug. 12.—Strenuous and effective labor on the part of the Scottdale Fire Department early this morning saved the town from what looked for sometime would be the worst fire in the history of Scottdale. Fire which started apparently at the back door of J. Falk's cloak and suit store caused damage amounting to several thousand dollars before it was subdued. The New Scottdale House, on the corner of Broadway and Pittsburgh streets, was damaged heavily in the rear buildings, and guests and employees had narrow escapes from being burned, or suffocated from the dense clouds of smoke that rolled up from the fire.

The fire took place about 1 o'clock. From the opinions of most of those who have examined the premises the blaze started at the back door of the Falk store which is on the first floor of the hotel building. The back door was burned on the outside but not on the inside, the transom was burned out, the shutters burned off, and above it the laundry of the hotel badly scorched and the ceiling burned out. Next to Falk's is the clothing store of S. R. Morris. The damage is not so great here, the outside not being so greatly burned, but the goods on the inside of the store are damaged by water and smoke. Falk seems to be the heaviest loser, his wraps being burned in the rear of the store, and other articles scorched and water-soaked.

The fire ran along the back part of the hotel building, and the flames leaped to the top of the building, which is four stories in height, and were thrown clear across Broadway almost to the Reid building, when the firemen started to turn the water on. Pieces of wood and tarred paper were carried upward by the flames and fell on adjoining buildings threatening to set them on fire. Across Pittsburgh street the L. F. Miller block which fronts on Broadway to the alley was in great danger. Dennis DeHaven, the restaurant man, and George Satriakov, the candy kitchen man, and others threw water from buckets on the awnings and roof and prevented them catching fire from the pieces of blazing roofing and wood that fell on them.

The blaze went along the two story portion of the hotel building, burned down a porch, burned a large chicken house, cremated two dozen chickens, burned a pigeon house, and scorched the small building in which liquors are kept just back of the bar room.

The firemen did strenuous work. The smoke was stifling and the guests and employees in the hotel were hard to arouse. Several doors in the hotel were broken in and the occupants of the rooms dragged out. No one was injured during the fire which lasted a couple of hours.

There was some difficulty in getting word to the furnace to sound the alarm, but before the whistle was done blowing the firemen were on the scene and had the water turned on. They had two ladders in use and climbed to the top and turned the water on from that height most effectively.

The New Scottdale House is owned by C. M. Greenawald, and the tenant is Theodore C. Kenney. The damage to the building will run between $1,000 to $2,000, insured. It is estimated that the other damage to surrounding buildings and stock amounts to about as much, also insured. Just how the fire originated is not known today.

HENRY CLEWS IS NOT DISCOURAGED.

Only Wants Congress to Stop Tariff Tinkering and Go Home.

BANKER'S LETTER HOPEFUL

Even Short Crops Will Not Do Serious Harm and Reports of Big Cotton Yield is Good Sign—Politics, Farmers Recovery.

By Henry Clews.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The financial element just now is in the harvest. Wednesday's government report was somewhat of a disappointment, inasmuch as it indicated a wheat crop of 30,000,000 bushels less than a year ago and a corn crop of 500,000,000 bushels below last year. This is probably the worst that can happen, and there is good reason to accept this estimate with reserve. Since these returns were made there has been considerable improvement in the crop situation, and while it would be foolish to now anticipate as good wheat and corn crops as last year, still the situation is by no means serious and the harvest of these two important crops is quite likely to reach the average. There is every reason to anticipate a fair yield of corn, and the deterioration of 500,000,000 bushels is not going to prove a very important matter, especially as some portions of the country have considerably increased their acreage in this cereal. Nor is the loss in oats so grave a matter since the automobile has so largely superseded the horse. Some compensation for shrinkage in the cereal crops will be found in a larger cotton crop. The price of the latter has fallen in consequence; and in view of the large yield results should prove a satisfactory factor to the grower and prove an immense benefit to the country through the heavier exports of this staple which will inevitably follow a good yield. For some time past the cotton trade of the world has been seriously interfered with by the excessive price of cotton, and this great industry should receive much benefit by a return of cotton to a more normal level. At home the cotton goods industry has been further embarrassed by tariff agitation, and any relief through cheaper cotton would be most welcome to all concerned.

Upon general business the present crop situation can have no harmful effect. Of course, a large yield of corn, wheat and oats would have been very beneficial and was much desired; yet the fact that we are now almost sure of average crops at good prices assures fair business conditions during the next few months. The most serious interference with business at present is the disturbed condition of politics. Industry has been much depressed by continued fruitless tariff agitation and Congressional investigations of industrial corporations. There is no prospect of any genuine tariff action being taken this summer. The sooner Congress adjourns, therefore, and stops talking the better for itself and the people of the United States. Congress is getting upon the business man's nerves by its open intemperance dealing with business matters, which is done or can't fully understand. The country needs a rest from useless and injurious agitation. Investigations, which serve no purpose except to bring ambitious Congressmen into notoriety, have done much to retard a recovery in business which was certainly due, and really pointed to develop. It is perfectly true that some of our big corporations are deservedly suffering from the misdeeds of the past, but that is no excuse for the threatened attacks which are being made upon all forms of business organizations. It should be recognized that the abuses of the past are being gradually but surely remedied; and that time and delicate treatment are required for the removal of many of these ills, which will never be repented. Business men are tired and disgusted at such persistent interference, which makes the execution of plans for a large and healthy future practically impossible. Europe, meanwhile, looks on in wonder at the patience of the average American with what over there often seems hysterical and purposeless attacks upon legitimate business methods. All admit that there are evils in our industrial system to be cured, but legislative sandbagging is not the proper cure. Let us have a reasonable and quiet enforcement of the law, instead of hysterical attacks for the sake of political and newspaper notoriety.

When Congress adjourns the country will certainly breathe a deep sigh of relief. The present session, it will be remembered, was called purposely to pass the reciprocity bill, which, it is unfortunate that its activities were not limited to its original purpose. The great tariff agitation has been perfectly useless and resulted only in harm; it being quite evident that this great problem will not be adjusted until after another Presidential election. The tariff should be taken out of politics, but that seems impossible for the reason that the interests affected are too strong and too belligerent to be satisfied except by a test of strength; and what is equally potent, the politicians cannot be persuaded to surrender an issue which offers such effective campaign material. No serious tariff changes, therefore, are to be anticipated for some time to come. The question may be again revived, but early action is impossible, and President Taft will surely throw his whole influence against any hasty decision until the evidence gathered by the tariff board has been carefully prepared for public digestion. Such a course is wise, and should aid to restore confidence and soothe the nerves of the over-irritated American manufacturer and merchant. The patience of the average business man has been so much overstrained during the past six months that he is apt to take a more pessimistic view of the situation than is really warranted. A few weeks or months of rest from political disturbance, and business sentiment will quickly become more normal and more hopeful.

Stock market conditions were somewhat improved technically by the recent decline of 5 to 15 points in the active shares. Considerable liquidation has taken place and stocks, it should be remembered, will now gradually get into stronger hands. Money continues easy and although the crop moving season is close at hand, there is no indication of stringency. The export movement, particularly of cotton, will soon begin and this will improve our position in the foreign money market. London is still undergoing some financial strain, the situation which developed after the Bank of England failed to have yet entirely cleared up. Canada may make heavier demands upon the money market this autumn than usual owing to the large crops there and great industrial development. Just now railroad shares often look attractive as investments, and in spite of the heavy expenses the probabilities are that dividends will be well maintained. The crop outlook has been amply discounted, and speculative sentiment is conservative but hopeful, so that in the absence of unfavorable developments stocks should be a purchase on further declines. At the same time the situation will bear watching. Security issues have been exceedingly heavy since the first of the year, political conditions are not satisfactory, the cost of living is again rising and there are renewed rumblings of labor troubles. Altogether the situation warrants hopeful views not unmixed, however, with prudence and caution.

Woman's World

Mme. Emma Wede Emilio de Gogorza in Paris.

Mme. Emma Wede Emilio de Gogorza.

The marriage recently in Paris, of the famous prima donna, Mme. Emma Dames, to Emilio de Gogorza, the equally well known baritone, terminates a rather sensational romance of several years' standing.

Mme. Dames, as all the world knows, was formerly the wife of Julian Storr, and this is also De Gogorza's second matrimonial venture, his first wife, Mrs. Elsa de Gogorza, having obtained a divorce from him recently. At one time there was much unpleasant gossip about Mme. Dames having given Mrs. Elsa de Gogorza $100,000 for setting her husband free from matrimonial chains. These rumors, however, were entirely without foundation, as the only recompense for alienated affections the first Mrs. de Gogorza has ever received is represented in a monthly check of $500, which is sent to her regularly from her former husband.

Many beautiful wedding gifts were received by Mme. Dames from the De Gogorza family. The baritone's mother presented her new daughter-in-law with a collection of rare old Spanish fans, and a sister-in-law sent yards of priceless point lace.

Mme. Dames de Gogorza has a sumptuous apartment in Paris, which probably will be the future home of the singers when their professional engagements allow of domestic life, for the beautiful soprano will continue to charm the musical public with her glorious voice.

Before the opening of the New York opera season next fall the newly wedded pair will make a concert tour, singing in most of the large cities of this country.

HOW TO KEEP COOL WHEN HOT.

"Forget It," Advises Dr. Wiley, Government's Head Chemist.

PRACTICES WHAT HE PREACHES

Weights 240 Pounds, But Hasn't Suffered From the Heat in Years—Fat People Not Hotter Than Thin Ones, Power of Auto Suggestion.

Is your collar wilted, your clothing a second cousin to a towel in a Turkish bath and your temper frayed and frizzled? Are you ready to bet a month's salary that the thermometer stands not a degree less than 212 when your friends greet you with the obsequious remark, "Oce whis, ain't this a scorch?"

If so, forget it, and auto suggest yourself into a state of coolness that would satisfy an Eskimo. Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, United States head of the bureau of chemistry and pure food man, has the prescription, and it's free of charge. Moreover, he takes his own medicine, so the remedy can't be entirely an experiment.

"I haven't suffered from the heat in years," he said, "and I weigh close to 240 pounds too. Does my collar, cuffs or my shirt resemble the wearing apparel of the usual fat man at this time of the year? Not a rag of the heat on them, is there? Hot? Nonsense! See just imagine you're not because you let yourself think you are! If you hadn't time to think that you wouldn't be hot."

"When the temperature gets as high as 90 every last mother's son of us is talking about it. And we do not stop to realize that the temperature of the inside of our bodies is constantly at 98.4. That is one's normal temperature. Now, then, why should we suffer so much from the heat when it is the exception for us to have to endure weather a few degrees hotter than the inside of our own bodies?"

"More than that, it is not half so dangerous for the human body to become overheated as it is for it to become too cool. Take the cholera patient, for instance. As long as his temperature remains high the physician does not anticipate immediate death. But let it fall a half degree and the doctor is alarmed; if it drops a whole degree then the end of the patient is but a matter of a few hours."

Auto Suggestion.
"I am not a Christian Scientist, but I do believe in the power of thought. Auto suggestion will cure every imaginary disease of mankind, and I believe that three-fourths of man's ailments are purely imaginative. I don't mean by that statement that a person can change conditions. On a hot day a man by auto suggestion cannot vary his temperature, but he can auto suggest himself beyond its power to annoy him. Why don't I suffer with the heat? Because I don't think of it. Keep your mind off it. When indoors I have my books and papers to read. When I am out of doors there is always something to keep my mind occupied and make me as comfortable in the sun as in the shade."

"Did you ever see a boy playing baseball in the broiling hot sun and complain about it? Certainly not! But put that same boy to work on the garden in the same sun, and—well—he'd almost faint dead away from the heat. When he is playing ball he forgets the sun and everything but ball. But when he has to work in the sun, he feels the sun immediately, thinks of it and becomes hot and exhausted."

"I've cured lots of people who suffered with the heat and changed them from grumblers to human beings, as happy as clams at high tide. I have had them come to me and say they were completely done up from the heat. 'Do you like fishing, walking, boating, baseball or any other sport in particular?' I asked them. If they did care for any of these sports I told them to get out and indulge in them. 'Forget the day, the heat and everything but that which you are interested in,' I advised them. 'That's the cure for heat.'"

Fat a Nonconductor.
"Are fat people really hotter than thin ones? Of course not. People who are fat and go around grumbling about the heat simply make themselves miserable and their friends as well. As a matter of fact, fat is a splendid non-conductor. A fat man should be no warmer, if as warm, than a thin one. Fat keeps the heat from entering the body and also from leaving it."

Not only has Dr. Wiley very strong ideas regarding the thought method of keeping cool in summer, but he also has rules regarding what to eat and what to drink. Strange as it may seem, he is not opposed to people drinking ice water—in winter! For summer, he claims, a drink that is 60 or 65 degrees in temperature is cool enough for anybody."

Scholarships on Pennsylvania

Robert Francis Hohman of Fort Wayne, Indiana, and John James Caldwell of New Florence, Pa., were today announced as the successful candidates for the Frank Thomson Scholarships. At present there are eight holders of these scholarships, which is the number maintained out of a fund endowed in the sum of $120,000 by the three children of the late Frank Thomson, former President of the Pennsylvania railroad, as a memorial to their father. Each year two scholarships, each amounting to $800 annually, are awarded on competitive examination to sons of employees of the Pennsylvania railroad system.

The Frank Thomson scholarships were established in 1907, and were designed to afford to sons of living and deceased employees of all the lines of the Pennsylvania railroad system an opportunity for a technical education so as to enable them to qualify themselves for employment by the company. Each year two four-year scholarships are awarded, and this year the competitive examination was open to the sons of some 182,000 men. After passing the examination, the winners of the scholarships must qualify for admission to one of the technical schools approved by the company before receiving certificates entitling them to draw upon the scholarship fund.

Robert F. Hohman is the son of Henry Hohman, a machinist in the company's shops at Fort Wayne, Indiana. He is 20 years of age and is a graduate of the Fort Wayne High School, in the class of 1909. Since that time he has been attending the Valparaiso Normal College. He expects to enter Columbia University of New York.

John James Caldwell is the son of John M. Caldwell, a freight conductor on the Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania railroad east of Pittsburgh. He was graduated from the Greensburg High School this year, being an honor man of his class. He intends to enter Lehigh University.

Last year, the successful candidates were George F. Wolfe of Youngwood, Pa., who is now a student in the Civil Engineering Department of Lehigh University, and M. Roy Strong of Cleveland, O., who is attending the Case School of Applied Science of Cleveland. The 1909 scholarships were awarded to Benjamin M. Snyder, Jr., of Elmira, N. Y., now a student at the University of Pennsylvania, and Wallace B. Porter of Youngstown, O., who is attending Harvard School of Applied Science. Morris E. Gill of Grand Rapids, Mich., now at the University of Michigan, and Harry W. Anderson of Pottsville, Pa., now at the University of Pennsylvania, were awarded the 1908 scholarships.

The examinations for the Frank Thomson scholarships were conducted by the Collegiate Entrance Examination Board of New York City, and correspond in general to the entrance requirements of the scientific department of universities, colleges and technical schools.

VANILLA BEANS.

They Are Not Beans at All, but Pods Filled With Tiny Seeds.

The vanilla plant is the only orchid of any industrial value. As orchids go, the plant is not unattractive, for the foliage is much greener and more enduring than in the case of most of the species. It is a climber, and when the leaves are fresh it brightens a small tree trunk wonderfully. The vanilla plant, to give it its full name, is a terrestrial parasite. It climbs from the ground, but once established has feeding stations on the bark all along the line. The leaves—long, very smooth and light green—are alternate, and at the axil of each is a sucker a few inches in length that fastens itself securely to the tree, lying flat against the bark.

The blossoms are inconspicuous. The resultant pods that are the vanilla of the industrial world. They are slim pods six to eight inches long and when dried for the market are of a rich, deep reddish brown. These are called vanilla beans, but without warrant. They contain no bean; the seed is a thin dust. These seeds are the black specks that are usually found in the finest grade of vanilla ice cream, the best chefs of the world over preferring to grind the "beans" rather than use the extract. Vanilla is found growing wild in the Bahamas, West Indies and Central America. In Madagascar and some of the neighboring islands it has been introduced and now forms an important article of export. But American vanilla is the best.—Harper's Weekly.

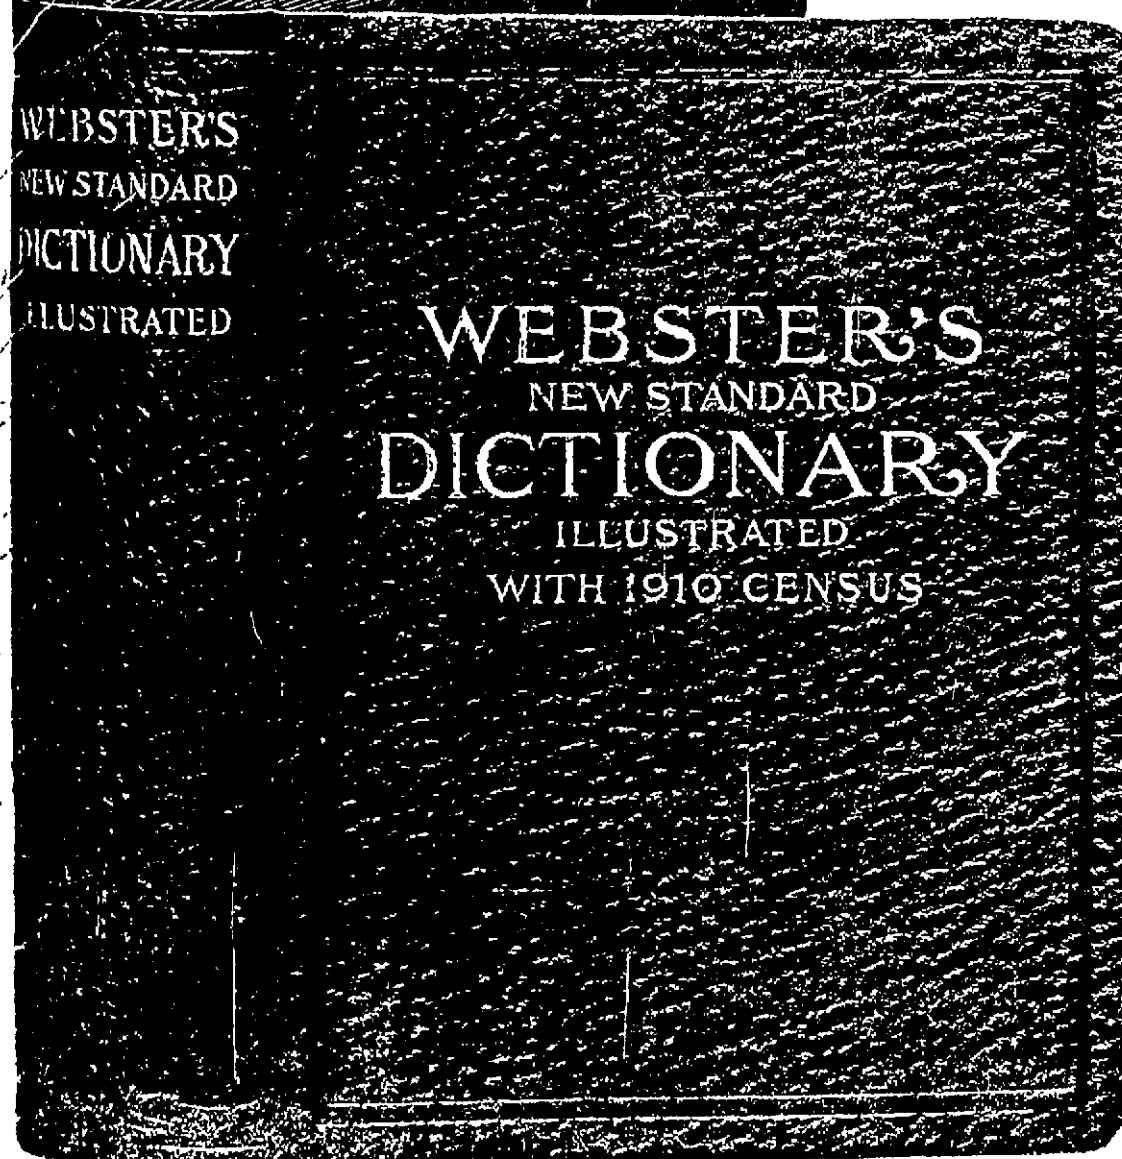

Played No Favorites.
John Addison Porter, once secretary to the president, overrode his account on one occasion, when he went off on a vacation, and Comptroller Tracywell disallowed it. When Secretary Porter returned to Washington he told the president about it, and President McKimley telephoned to Tracywell to come to the White House. On his arrival there Tracywell was asked why he had disallowed that account, and he replied:

"I disallowed it, Mr. President, because it is my duty as comptroller of the treasury to protect the money of the people from every kind of misconstruction of the law. If you should draw one month's salary in advance I should certainly disallow it."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

I hold all indulgence of sadness that has the slightest tincture of discontent to be a grave delinquency.—Ellot.

CHAPTER VII.

When I called her up three days later she seemed to have forgotten that any such incident had ever happened. She passed the usual pleasantries of the day over the wire, laughed as softly and musically as ever, and ended by telling me that it might call that evening. When I did so she received me with neither more nor less than her customary friendliness. I was mystified. As to what was going on in the wonderful that lay behind her eyes I had no conception further than the evident fact that she had not been seriously offended. And that was so late enough for the present. Of course I would renew the acquaintance when the opportunity seemed propitious, but for the time being I would resort to steady slogs. I renewed my devotion.

As had been the case before, I again haunted her. Necessarily this soon became bruited around the circle of our acquaintances, and occasionally echoes of the gossip reached my ears. Bruce spoke of it once or twice quizzically, but as I ignored his remarks he soon quit bothering me with them. Clara, as usual, had her little say. "I hear that you and Mrs. Dace are exceedingly good friends these days, and that you are with her nearly everywhere," she began sweetly. "I wish you would tell me about it." Now as a matter of fact I was secretly proud to be recognized as the accepted suitor of so beautiful a woman, and Clara was an entirely different proposition from Bruce to confide in. So I admitted nonchalantly that we were on excellent terms. She frowned a little.

"Well, I suppose, of course, that it is all right, and anyway it is none of my business. But she is such a mysterious woman. She lives like a duchess and everybody says her husband left her scarcely anything. When that little is gone what will she do unless she marries a rich man? And how on earth could you get money enough to support a woman of her tastes as she would demand to be supported? You must answer me that, Tom Haliday."

Now I had rather expected something like this from Clara, but nevertheless the question annoyed me somewhat. It was the identical one that had been making my sane moments a bugaboo for many nights and days past; still I hated to be reminded of it by another person. Even now I was beginning to feel the drain of her upon my resources, although I had done nothing extravagant. I had taken her to the theater, paid for carriages, and bought her luncheons and flowers, but beyond that had done practically nothing. And in a certain way there was much satisfaction in the thought that I had offered her no little in the way of allurement besides my own society. While there were men by the score who would have been overjoyed to squander money upon her, she had laughingly excused herself to them for the sake of inexpensive little overtures with me. As proof that she really preferred me it seemed conclusive, and was the thing that gave me the most hope. However I did not speak and Clara went on:

"Some of her gowns cost more than you earn in a month, while as for supporting an establishment at the Arcadia—well, of course the very idea is preposterous. Now why don't you be sensible? I smiled, sensing what was coming.

"And what is your idea of sense, Clara?" I inquired.

"Well, take up with a nice little girl like Mollie Osborn, for instance." It was just as I had suspected, for Clara and Mollie are chums and devoted in advancing each other's interests. But the idea that any man, once knowing Mrs. Dace as I know her, could be content with a girl like Mollie struck me as no deliciously nonsensical that I could not refrain from laughing.

"It is absurd, Clara. Certainly Mollie is strictly all right, but she would look like a mouse beside Mrs. Dace." She nodded spiritfully.

"Now you are talking sense. Like a nice little white mouse beside a leopardess, exactly." I did not like the comparison.

"Do you mean to say that Mrs. Dace is a leopardess?" I demanded with some warmth. Clara was as cool as a cucumber.

"Oh, I don't know. Anyway, she is as beautiful as one. And viewing her as I have only from a distance, I have somehow gained the impression that there are traits in common between them. She is so wonderfully smooth and soft and quiet moving, you know." She looked up at me sideways, saw the displeasure that rested upon my face and broke into a laugh as she gave my cheek a pat.

"Of course you must not mind what I say, Tom, dear. I really know almost nothing about your charming, and I trust to your level head to take care of you. Only please do be careful!" So we laughed together and dropped that subject hard then and there.

Up to this time the course of no man's love ever ran smoother than had mine for Mrs. Dace. Yet it was only a few days after this conversation with Clara that there happened a thing so awful to me at the time that besides itself could have colored no torture more exquisite. I had never been jealous of Mrs. Dace for the simple reason that I had seen no cause to be; yet I knew that the fires of that passion slumbered within me like those of a latent volcano. The more thought of another making love to her was a torment. She had told me that few men interested her, and the frequency of my attendance upon her seemed to preclude the idea of a rival of consequence lurking in the background. That I was being publicly exhibited to attract attention and thus used as a sheepskin to cloak a real wolf, had never entered my mind until the thought in all its hideousness was forced upon me purely by accident. I had spent the evening downtown and was going home at about eleven, when a circumstance occurred to me. A few evenings before, when Mrs. Dace's, who had requested me to open a bottle of wine, which I had done by means of a tending corkerew I carried upon my key ring. When I had reached my own door later in the evening I had discovered that my keys were missing, and remembered at the time that I had laid the ring containing them and the corkerew upon the table for opening the bottle. I had forgotten to replace them in my pocket, but knowing they were perfectly safe, I felt no uneasiness; told myself that I would recover them upon my next visit, and ringing the bell was admitted by Mrs. Tobbits. I had not seen Mrs. Dace since, and now on my way home decided to stop off for a moment at the Arcadia, and if she or the maid were home I would claim the keys in order to avoid disturbing the housekeeper, who retired early. I therefore stopped from the car at the point where it crossed the boulevard upon which she resided and hurried towards her building.

I chanced to be upon the opposite side of the street from my destination, and as I was about to cross the way my steps were arrested by the warning honk of a motor car. Pausing at the curb I watched its swift approach. Its lights glared like the eyes of some spreading monster. By the street lamps I saw that it was a ponderous affair, and a pang of regret stabbed me that I was not able to possess it like. Almost as huge as a locomotive it looked as it rolled to a point opposite me, and then suddenly swinging in a close circle stopped in front of the entrance across the way. Instinctively I paused in the shadow to watch it.

Its door swung open and out onto the pavement there stepped a great man with a massive bulldog shaped head and neck, and mustaches that flowed from his lips like yellow fountains. By the daylight I could see the bear-like power of his arm as he thrust out his hand to some one yet within the car, and a cold premonition of something wretched to come swept over me. To my ears there came a short, peculiar cough, and from this man of which I had heard, as well as from pictures which I had seen in the newspapers, I instantly recognized him. The dragon had arrived in his juggernaut. Richard Mackay, the infamous, the moral leper, who, corrupt of soul and body, had long reigned as autocrat of the underworld and prince of apollomen, loomed across the way. Fearless and able, powerful yet subtle, always a dominant force for evil, he was one from whom any man might recoil with secret fear.

"Demand That You Tell Me Instantly Why You Say These Things, Sir!"

And an instant later the wretched thing came to pass. From out of the car and into his grasp there stepped the woman whom I loved with all my soul, and my heart seemed to stop. With his arm around her waist, brazenly indifferent as to who might witness he passed across the walk by her side and threw the door wide by a sweep of his free hand. For some reason I learned later it was because of a weakened spring—the door failed to close promptly, and I distinctly saw them in the subdued light of the interior as they stood close together awaiting the descent of the elevator car. It was but a fleeting glimpse, yet had it lasted longer I believe I should have cried outright in my agony. For as plainly as I ever saw anything in my life I saw him draw her close to him as impulsively as I had done in my outburst as he lifted her face and half buried it beneath his sweeping mustache. Then the door mercifully closed, shutting out the sight and leaving with horror filling my breast and the coldness of death creeping over me. For an instant I was incapable of movement, then regaining partial control of myself, lurched away. Benumbed of brain, my knees turned to water, and with jealousy tearing at my vitals like a vulture, I staggered homeward. Upon the night of horror that followed I do not care to dwell. Like one in a fever I tossed through the hours sleepless save for the fitful dream moments when I wandered far into the evil haunts of the nightmare. Morning creeping grayly into my room found me with head splitting and not eyes that stared at the ceiling. As one who is crippled with rheumatism in every joint. I arose stiffly, bathed myself and crawled out into the air. It was Sunday morning, and already the chiming of distant bells mellowed in my ears. It was all plain to me now, her deceit and treachery; and had I been sentenced over night to the gibbet I could not have been more wretched. In the miserableness of it I stood soul sick before the utter hollowness of all things. There could be but one explanation of it. The hideous innuendoes that had haunted my ears like the whisperings of a sea shell had been less than the truth, and I had been used as the false light to mislead the world; as a dummy, the fool. Oh, the treachery and the wickedness and the black shame of it! And that that woman for whom I would have given my heart's blood could be guilty of such cruelty to me! Broken heartedly, I sobbed beneath the oaks like a child.

Plainly there was but one thing I could do. I must renounce her unqualifiedly even though it well-nigh killed me, for I could never share her with anybody; as well might I run to be asked to cut his heart in twain. I must not even see her again for I dared not trust myself in her presence. What I might do if I should meet her alone I did not know. Whether I would violently denounce her for her faithlessness, break down miserably as I was now doing, or commit some other scene I could only conjecture. But in any case matters would not be mended. The injury was irreparable. I must cut her out of my life and pursue my way in wretchedness and silence. I returned to my rooms.

Uncle Abner was already putting away somewhere and I threw myself into a chair in what was nearly a physical collapse. I felt shrunken and hollow as though my vitals had been drawn from my body and I had fallen into myself. I was incapable of thinking logically and the weight that oppressed me was stifling. Before me life stretched away as a void, hopeless and destitute of light and through which I must drift miserably until it merged into eternity.

I must have sat in a half stupor for a long time, for as the tinkle of the telephone bell sounded in my deadened ears like a death rattle I got upon my feet and saw that it was nearly ten o'clock. Mechanically I picked up the receiver and asked what was wanted. Over the wire there came to me a voice which at first not every nerve to tingling and then turned me sick and faint in the reaction. For it was the voice of Mrs. Dace, softly musical, and filled with the cheerfulness of the morning as she inquired for me. In tones that sounded far away to my own ears I told her it was I who spoke.

"I did not recognize your 'hello'," she went on briskly. "Your voice does not sound at all natural this morning. I am afraid you dispirited last night. Anyway, it is such a lovely morning that I have been thinking perhaps you might wish to call and take me to church and afterwards for a little stroll along the boulevard. I have thought of lots of things tonight that I wish to tell you. And when we come back, if you care to give me a little more of your time, we will take luncheon here in my apartments. Will you come?"

My head swam and I leaned against the wall for support. The day previous an invitation such as this would have brought me from a sick bed to her on crutches, but now I shuddered as though a load had been dropped down my spine. That she should have dared, defended against the world, and given my heart could be so vilely treacherous! And now, with the sweetness of an angel she would lure me to her that she might resume her play of cat and mouse! Yes, Clara had been right. In stealth and cruelty she was all leopards. And she would even have the scene of the next act, in the sanctuary of the blessed discipline of love and truth!

Softly, full of music as a bell, I heard her voice calling to me and asking why I did not reply to her, and driven to immediate action my mind suddenly changed. I would go and see her. I would look upon her once more and then coldly tell her that our relations must at once cease. I would go no further, would give her no satisfaction at all, but making my forgotten keys the excuse for responding to her call, would claim them and bid farewell to her forever. In that way I would end the whole miserable business. Commanding my voice by an effort I answered that I would come at once, and hung up the receiver without waiting for her to address me further. I went to the mirror and looked into it. My lips were tense and colorless, my eyes blood-shot, and I seemed to have grown pounds thinner and years older overnight. Once more I bathed my face in cold water and set out for the Arcadia.

She opened the door at the first sound of the bell, and royally beautiful in her cool morning gown, stood smiling before me. At first she seemed about to approach me even closer, but as her eyes sought my face she drew back and her smile vanished as the sunshine behind a driving cloud. "Hi!" she inquired, quick solitude in her tones. I shook my head as I stepped within.

She closed the door behind me. "Oh, Tom, how you dispirited me," she said with an attempt at bantering. "But I am really surprised at you, Tom. I had thought your morals almost too good for you. However, a walk in the open air will do you good. We will omit the church if you don't care to go inside. I only used that as a subterfuge to get you to come, you know. Can you forgive such deceit in me?" I looked at her helplessly, marvelling at her duplicity. The shadow of a frown came to her brow.

"Why don't you say something?" You only stand there and stare at me so unpleasantly," she went on with a trace of impatience. "Thoroughly sick at heart I addressed her as I changed my mind again into the determination to confront her with her heartless-ness."

"Mrs. Dace, I have come to tell you that I cannot see you any more. That you made a fool of me for some purpose of your own. It is of course not necessary that I should inform you. That you have wounded me greatly and caused me much suffering you may not know; but it is my satisfaction for you to have that knowledge I now confess it to you. Do not think that I have anything more to say to you except to ask for the keys I inadvertently left here and bid you goodby."

Her eyes opened wide and she stood staring blankly into my face. "I don't understand—what have I done?"—you look so strange—"she stammered. I did not answer.

Her mouth straightened a bit and a chill came into her voice. "But I insist upon knowing. You have suddenly changed me with very unpleasant things and I have the right to demand an explanation in justice to myself. That right being given me, I may or may not wish to avail myself of my privilege to make a reply. But having had that opportunity you need not fear that I shall ask anything further of you. Still, I feel that there must be some mistake. You must explain yourself."

I turned my face from her as I answered bitterly:

"Had any one in the world told me what I now know I should have struck him down. When rumors came to my ears I always shut them out because of my faith in you. But what my own eyes see I cannot doubt. I had grown to trust you implicitly, and you yourself molded and cemented my faith by your protestations. That I loved you better than my own life I have told you and I think convinced you. You have paid me back with heartless treachery."

"I demand that you tell me instantly why you say these things, sir," she cried, the hot crimson flaring in her cheeks. With the cold deliberation with which a gladiator might dispatch his crippled enemy I returned to the attack.

"Last night I happened to be passing this place. I had no intention of springing upon you; I never discovered smiling before me. At first she seemed about to approach me even closer, but as her eyes sought my face she drew back and her smile vanished as the sunshine behind a driving cloud. "Hi!" she inquired, quick solitude in her tones. I shook my head as I stepped within.

Don's Kidney Pills relieve backache. Cure every kidney ill. Many people in this locality recommend Don's Kidney Pills.

Here's one case: Mrs. W. L. Johnson, 111 Chestnut street, Seaside, Pa., says: "I was afflicted with kidney complaint for some time and was caused much suffering by backache, dizzy spells and headache. The least work tired me and I did not rest well. I finally decided that I was in need of a kidney medicine and as I had often heard of Don's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply. Their use made a marked improvement from the first and gradually the symptoms of my trouble disappeared, until I was enjoying good health. I consider Don's Kidney Pills a most efficient kidney medicine." (Statement given October 8, 1907.)

A Second Statement. When Mrs. Johnson was interviewed on October 9, 1909, she said: "I can still recommend Don's Kidney Pills highly, for the relief they gave me was permanent. I have had no need of a kidney medicine during the past two years."

Test of Strength Will Come Today

Whether the strong Hecla No. 2 team is to have real opposition in its fight for the Lynch cup will be decided this afternoon when Leisenring goes to Trauger. Present indications are that Leisenring will be the most formidable obstacle in the path of Trauger's ambitions. The outcome of today's game will show whether the boys at C. B. Frank's plant have a chance.

Edenborn lost unexpectedly to Southwest No. 1 earlier in the week and Leisenring, while defeating Leimont, did not pile up the heart-breaking score that Hecla No. 2 made Thursday. Leimont, however, has never been regarded as a strong contender because of his failure to play consistent ball. Leisenring is hardly expected to get stage fright and should give Trauger its hardest fight of all.

Southwest No. 1 invading the south end this afternoon, meeting Olympian Wynn. The defeat of Edenborn has given the Southwest No. 1 boys considerable respect in Frick league circles and they will be held in whole respect by all corners. Today's game will show whether their defeat of Edenborn was a flash in the pan or the real thing.

Ban on Magee is Lifted by Lynch

President Lynch of the National League has lifted the ban of suspension on Sherwood Magee, the Philadelphia outfielder, and he will go back into the game Wednesday when the Phillies resume playing on their home grounds.

Magee was suspended for the balance of the season for hitting Umpire Finnegan and this decision was recently sustained by the league directors. Having been suspended, President Lynch has decided to give Magee a chance. He will remain in the game as long as he behaves himself towards the arbitrators, which he has promised to do.

The reinstated player is well known in Connellsville having played for several weeks with the Collier basketball team last winter. He is regarded as one of the most brilliant players in the National League. Magee's reinstatement is expected to be a big help to the Phillies, who were badly shorthanded when Manager Doolin broke his leg. It put three of the best players out of commission, Doolin, Magee and Titus. Titus is back in the game and with Magee playing once more the team will have its usual lineup of outfielders. Magee, Pinkett and Titus are regarded as probably the best trio of outfielders on any team in the big leagues except Detroit.

A Great Seine to Clean Out Carp

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 12.—Fishings with a seine 5,000 feet in length and 20 feet in width, operated by a powerful windlass, is the work in which employees of Bartholomew Brothers of St. Louis, Mo., will engage the middle of this month, in an effort to clear the lakes in Spokane county of carp. The fish will be sent to St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago and other eastern points in refrigerator cars. It is estimated that the total shipments will amount to more than 50 cars. Trout, bass and other game fish caught in the draws will be put back into the water, according to an agreement with the firm and A. Uhlig, fish and game warden of the county.

The seine fishermen will be accompanied by a state official, who will see that the game fish are protected. Warden Uhlig says that carp weighing up to 30 pounds have been caught on vegetable and fish bait in the vicinity of Spokane this summer. It is estimated that the carp have destroyed millions of trout eggs during the last few years.

Woman's World

Miss Florence Sutton a Coming Woman Among Tennis Players.

MISS FLORENCE SUTTON.

Miss Florence Sutton, a sister of May Sutton, who won the tennis championship in 1909, is looked upon in the sporting world as a coming woman among tennis players. The younger Miss Sutton has been doing splendid work with the racket since she came from home in California early in the season, and she bids fair to uphold the family reputation for expert tennis play.

Tennis is being taken up by girls more strenuously than ever this summer, and it's a fine game for women, but it takes incessant practice and superb health to make a strong player, and a sure eye, a quick and decisive brain and unerring judgment to make a clever one. Some of the attributes may be acquired by training, but not all of them, still, any girl, blessed with normal health and strength may become, with little effort, a better than the average tennis player and derive some of the real benefits of the game.

SUFFRAGETTES WILL FAST.

Arrange For Week of Self Denial to Sixty per cent. of women voters. Sixty per cent. of the women voters of New York City, in the tower of which is the headquarters of the woman suffrage party of New York City.

"Shall we have lemonade?" one of them asked the others tentatively. "Lemonade at 5 cents? It isn't August yet. We'll have chocolate nut sundae, the best," said a large suffragette in a sailor hat. "Ah," she sighed when the sundae had come, each with a cherry on top, "make the most of your chances now, for the week of self denial comes soon."

Yes, the suffragettes are planning a whole week of self denial, beginning August 15. Pled by accounts of how Englishwomen raise big sums of money in no time at all for the cause, the members of the woman suffrage party have resolved to see if they can't do the same by giving up things they are fond of for seven days. A list of the wealth which it is expected will be during this week for women fast will be sent to the party coffers, and half will be sent to California to aid the suffrage campaign there.

All varieties of self denial are planned by the eager suffragettes. One is going to do without butter. "Butter is expensive," she explained, "and I'm getting too fat anyhow." All will eschew ice cream soda; neither will any go shopping during the week of self denial.

It is agreed women wearing yellow uniforms are observed in the shops during the next five weeks lying in lingerie blouses and jabs, put it down to the necessity of preparing for the nonspending week that's to come.

Egyptian Women Run Newspaper. Egyptian women have a weekly newspaper, owned and edited by women. The appearance of the newspaper is regarded as a favorable sign of the development of the women of that country and as a promise of the regeneration of Egypt. The purpose of the paper is to improve the condition of the Moslem women, to educate them and to fit them to earn their own livelihood. It is expected to develop their standard of thought and intelligence and to train them to think and act for themselves. Egyptian women are employed as writers, and the weekly paper relates the society affairs of Cairo, tells of fashion and prints fiction.

MATHIAS BRANT DIES

Former State Senator From Fayette and Greene Counties. WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 12.—Mathias Brant, 82 years old, prominent in Democratic politics died here last evening. He was born in Wayne township a son of Christopher Brant and when 16 years old started to teach school. Sixteen years later he retired from the teaching profession and became interested in stock raising and trading. Before there was any railroad transportation in this section, he frequently made trips on foot, with stock to Cumberland, Md.

Later he became interested in politics and from 1891 to 1895 served two terms in the Legislature. From 1891 to 1895 he served in the State Senate.

It is Criminal to Neglect the Skin and Hair

THINK of the suffering tentailed by neglected skin troubles—mental, because of disfigurement, physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft, white hands, and good hair. These blessings, so essential to happiness and even success in life, are often only a matter of a little thoughtful care in the selection of effective remedial agents. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. B, Boston, will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on Skin and Scalp Treatment.
